In one of Dr. Ayer's lectures he states that chemistry confers more practical benefit on mankind, than any other science, yet from no other source could more be so easily obtained. The arts and economies which chemistry would teach, if more thoroughly and generally understood, would speedily exercise a most beneficent influence. He freely confesses that he is indebted to this science for the virtues of his remedies, and advises that the practical application of chemistry to medicine, the arts, manufactures, and agriculture be enjoined upon our colleges and schools.

This New Eclectic Magazine for March —Reference has been made before in these columns to this excellent monthly, and the present number seems equal if not better than its predecessors. A brief glance at the table of contents will give a hint as to the richness of its readings. The liberal triumphant of England; Pines of Finn, the Irish Yankee; Glimpses of Tuscany, Friends of my Youth, Little barefoot, Morning Land, The Luck of roving camp; Bonnets; How to read Americans; A line steel portrait of that eminent English reformer, John Bright, adorns this number.
The important announcement is made that the next number of the Eclectic will consist of a combination of two leading southern magazines—The Eclectic and The Land We Love. This arrangement will add to the interest of the monthly, as in addition to the choice selections of English literature it will contain articles of home interest in reference to military affairs at home. Turnbull & Mur-lock, publishers, Baltimore, Md. $1 a year.

The Nursery for March visits its great family of little readers, telling them pleasant stories, commending well behaved children, and illustrating its pages with numerous beautiful engravings. As it becomes older the Nursery continues as youthful in character as first, so it fills the place its name implies admirably. J. L. Shorey, Boston, publisher.

EDUCATION.—Messrs. Schermerhorn & Co., of New York, have issued in a very convenient pocket form Thoughts on Education, by the great philosopher, John Locke, making a work of nearly 200 pages. It was written about 1660, nearly 200 years ago, and abounds in many sound thoughts on the subject discussed. The publishers have done well to present this work in so good a form.
15 cents a copy.

Woodstock, just issued in a very convenient form by D. Appleton & Co., N. Y., is one of the large series of Waverley novels by the world renowned writer, Walter Scott. It is a rather ghostly story, we judge, because a very ghostly poem of venerable years opens the book. Price, 25 cents.

March with its mixture of winter and spring, is heralded by the Riverside magazine for young people, which facilitates between skating and roses. The frontispiece by H. W. Herrick, is of maple sugar making, and Jacob Abbott furnishes a description of the process, and discloses something of the philosophy of it. The other contents are A boy in March (a poem); The Fairy Frost and Skating; Stories about roses; Which was the Happiest; Panama; Recollections of Fredrick Bremer; Hop, Skip, and Jump. The editor announces that Portia Crayon will reappear with his stories and sketches in the April number. Published by Hurd and Houghton, N. Y. $2.50.

The Phenological Journal for March contains to that of millions of old, worn out slaves in the south and north, and see what the duty of the white race is to God. What ye would that man should do to you do ye likewise. God has set you an example in a similar case and says, follow me. God did not let the old worn out Jews remain in Egypt for Pharaoh to wreak vengeance on by wholesale slaughter and starvation.
He told Moses to say to the elders of Israel to have a lamb slain and apply the blood to the door posts of every family, and that every family should borrow of their neighbor's goat as a reward for their labors, and take them to the land of Canaan. He did not confer that favor upon some young ones and some that would yet be born, but upon the race.

Now, if you would be God's disciples you must do as he did—do unto others as you would have him do to you. Now, let this government of America do as the Lord tells us, borrow of our neighbor, gold, and send a Moses to lead us to a land of Canaan, and you will do just what God wants you to do and for what you would be blessed.

Now, sir, as it relates to an act of congress, second session, her homestead acts, I have no doubt but that all the states will follow the example of Iowa and Minnesota, and perhaps the colored men to receive a homestead.
But suppose they do, there is not one out of a hundred thousand that has means to get it. God did not prepare a place for Israel—a Canaan—and leave them homeless to get there as best they could. He made them that was indebted to them pay them, he is no respecter of persons. Then do you likewise. Give us a land of Canaan in America, where we fought and giving the whole race money. Give us this land by ourselves where there will be none to molest us or make us afraid.
Our beloved Gerrit Smith made hundreds if not thousands of colored men voters in New York by the property qualification. He did not tell them to get these as best they could. Neither did he help a fellow to get their land, but he gave every man the means to get it.
For that act of benevolence I pray that Heaven may be his home. Do unto others as ye would be done by, was a special command of Christ.
What means, if it was not that? I never had but 20 days' schooling in my life, and of course no notice will be taken of what I say; I would kindly invite attention, and a reply by some lady or gentleman of greater advantages. But why not take this view of the matter, while it is beneath the dignity of the learned to waste words with the ignorant, it is the duty of the "Whatsoever ye would have others do to you, do ye even so to them; up on this hangs all the law and the prophets."

Mr. Editor.—When we, the colored race, look around us and see what God is doing for us in the shape of education, suffrage, and homesteads through the instrumentality of the white race, our souls glow within us. But while we would congratulate you, as it were, to the skies, in the name of God for what you have and are trying to do for us, we fear that your strength will be of no avail to us nor you. It is true that great events take much time to develop them, and that you, the white race, intend those blessings as merely preparatory to the great end aimed at. If so may the Lord bless you in your various capacities, national, financial, social, and individual.
But above all in a religious capacity.
Let us take up those blessings aforesaid, and dissect or analyze them, and then see how they look on their face.

In the first place let us see what relief on the whole sustains to each other in a financial capacity. Now every respectable and intelligent gentleman and lady will admit that the white race is indebted to every man, woman and child alike, that was a slave in America, or to their ancestors. Not to an individual, or individuals, but to the whole race alike that were slaves in America. This being the case if the white race will be blessed of God they must do as he tells them to. Christ said, if ye will my disciples ye must follow me. And Paul said, all things that was done afore time was for our instruction. Now let us look at these blessings. Suppose that in the progress of time the white race should educate a few colored men and prepare them for office, and should place them in some office. What good would that do if the race? It is the race that has suffered and must be rewarded. Let us suppose a case. You and three of your sons do a piece of work for a man, say for one thousand dollars, but you fail to receive pay. You are like us, there is no tribunal to which you can appeal, but Heaven. But in the progress of time by some miraculous interposition on the part of God, the debtor should be brought to a sense of his duty; he proposes in some indirect manner to pay two of the boys, and they should by some source provisionally realize a hundred thousand dollars. What good would that do you and your other son? you might have moldered to your mother dust in that time. It might be that you and the one son most needed pay—you having had a family to look after and has grown old. It may also have been that you had done the most of the work, being best physically and mentally for it.

Now, sir, apply this picture of your case to that of millions of old, worn out slaves in the south and north, and see what the duty of the white race is to God. What ye would that man should do to you do ye likewise. God
has set you an example in a similar
case and says, follow me. God did not let the old worn out Jews remain in Egypt for Pharaoh to wreak vengeance

It is generally known that in the spring there is more sickness than during any other season. This can easily be accounted for, but to prevent it is often much more difficult.
The whole system is in a relaxed condition which is most favorable to the development of disease. The great and sudden changes in the weather, finding the system already prepared, produce their effects—sickness and death.
This state of things can most effectually be guarded against by regularly using some good tonic blood purifier. The Ziegler Bitters is just what the system requires to resist disease.

What a Child Can Do.
"Pa, I have signed the pledge," said a little boy to his father, on coming home one evening; "will you help me to keep it?"
"Certainly," said the father.
"Well, I have brought a copy of the pledge, will you sign it, papa?"
"Nonsense, nonsense, my child!
What could I do when my brother officers called—the father had been in the army—if I was a teetotaler?"
"But do try, papa."
"Tut, tut; why you are quite a radical."
"Well, you won't ask me to pass the bottle, papa?"
"You are quite a fanatic, my child; but I promise not to ask you to touch it!"

Some two weeks after that two officers called in to spend the evening.
"What do you drink?" said they.
"Have you any more of that prime Scotch ale?"
"No," said he, "I have not, but I shall get some. Her, Willy, run to the store, and tell them to send some bottles up."

The boy stood before his father respectfully, but did not go.
"Come, Willy, run to the store, and tell them to send some bottles up." Still the boy did not go.
"Come, Willy! why, what's the matter? Come, run along."

He went, but came back presently without any bottles.
"Where's the ale, Willy?"
"I asked them for it at the store, and they put it upon the counter, but I could not touch it. O, pa, pa, don't be angry with me, I told them to send it up, but I could not touch it myself."

The father was deeply moved, and turning to his brother officers, he said:
"Gentlemen, you hear that? You can do as you please. When the ale comes you may drink it, but not another drop after that shall be drank in my house, and not another drop shall pass my lips. Willy? have you your temperance pledge?"
"Oh, yes, I have."
"Bring it, then!"

And the boy was back with it in a moment. The father signed it, and the little fellow clung around his neck with delight. The ale came, but no one drank, and the bottle stood on the table untouched. Children, sign the pledge, and ask your parents to help you keep it.

The Child's Pocket Etiquette.
IN TEN COMMANDMENTS.

1. Always say, Yes, sir; No, sir; Yes, papa; No, papa. Thank you, no, thank you; good night, good morning. Never say, how or which, for what. Use no slang terms. Remember that good spelling, reading, writing and grammar, are the base of true education.

2. Clean faces, clean clothes, shoes, clean teeth, and clean finger nails, indicate good breeding. Never leave your clothes about the room.
Have a place for everything, and everything in its place.

3. Rap before entering a room, and never leave it with your back toward the company. Never enter a private room, or public place, with your cap on.

4. Always offer your seat to a lady,

Cleveland & Pittsburgh R. R.
The Cleveland and Herald of Saturday says: The injunction against the Cleveland & Pittsburgh railway company, granted some time since by Judge Foot and Prentiss of the Cuyahoga Common Pleas at the suit of W. C.
Otis, was on Friday dissolved, and the road taken out of the hands of the receiver appointed. The court finds that an election has been held, and the affairs in dispute have been arranged satisfactorily to both parties, and therefore restores the road to the hands of the regularly elected officers of the company. Recent events have greatly affected the general opinion in regard to the Erie management and its control of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railway, and the very common indication at the unexpected revolution in the management of the road has subsided remarkably. The Broad Gauge party has evidently been gaining friends here, while the advantages the city has derived from it have been looked into a little.

How Long Tony "Sot" for his "Peter."

[From "A Week's Hunt in the Adirondack," Spirit of the Times.]

"Tony, that was a fellow in that party of Yorkers as sed he tuk yer likeness for yer last summer, and wanted me to remember him to you if I seed ye."

"He be hanged!" roared Tony. "I only wish he'd a come foun' o' my shanty when he went there, and I'd piked him—durned red-faced monkey!"

"Why so, Tony?" we all asked.

"Well, never you mind. I'd a hed his har sure's yer born."

Seeing Henry on the broad grin only excited our curiosity the more. So we torment Tony till he commenced:

"Well, ye must know—No, I won't tell it, neither. It allus makes me so all-fired mad when I think on't."

Now, Tony you've promised to tell us.

"Well, so I hev. Now, ye must know my ole woman an me went down to Chester las summer, and we see some o' her folks and buy some calker and things. It was an awful hot day, we wuz all dressed out in our best eluz, which only made us feel the hotter and more uncomfortable. I never ed bear them durned black store eluz any way. Well, we got to Chester, and we got to see the folks. Well, I felt rather thirsty, and I sez ten ole woman, 'My dear, I sez I, I jest a goun ten stop here at Downes and git one smitter, so you hold the boss a minit. Wall, I gits out and takes my drink, when I comes in, and they wants drinks all round. One uv em, with a face like a turkey gobbler, up and sez to me, sort o' peart, 'Uncle, wont you take within ten? I sez, 'Young man, I aint yer uncle; not to my noddle, I aint; but related or not, I dont care if I dew take one drink. I tuk another and started for the wagin, and on my gittin in the ole woman she commenced and sed she'd seed one o' them things as they tuk picters with in the feller's wagin."

"A'tawera," suggested Dash.

"No, it wuzn't. Den think I don't know the difference between a animal with a humped back and a square box? Well, she was a most tickled ten deth, for she wanted some picters tuk, and nothin would den but I must go and git him ten commence on us. So I gits out agin, and I goes in and I sez to the turkey gobbler feller, 'Say, Mister, air you one o' them fellers as goes round the country takin likenesses?' 'Wall, sez he, what if I am?' 'Why, my ole woman and me wants our picters tuk the wazt kind, and if ye'll git that concern out o' yer wagin, and take us hansum, we'll be obleged to ye.' 'All right,' sez he, a grin like a Chessey cat; get yer lady out, and I'll place ye in position.' So the ole woman she gits out, and the feller he takes two o'bers and he goes round the corner of the tavern, out uv sight o' the wagin, and he sot us both down right out in the hot sun, when sez, 'I Look-ee here, Mister, can't you git us in the shade as well?' 'No, sez he, 'we must git plenty of sunlight.' 'Well, sez I, 'you've found the best place in this town. Then I thought the fellow would bust himself a laffin, and all the rest was a lookin thru the winders, laffin ten kill. Well, he told us ten put our elbows out and knees in, and to look strate up at the weathercock on Downes ban till he told us to stop, while he went round and worked the machine. So we sot and sot, till I felt the sweat a runnin down my neck, and my high collar gradually gitten limper and limper, and my eyes began to water; and when we'd sot fur near half an hour I could stand it no longer, so I turned round, and sez I, 'See here, young feller aint you most theud?' Then come such a lot o' screechin and a laffin from Downes folks as I never heard afore. Cum to find out, them consarned young blackguards had all got inter their wagin leavin us there in the hot sun. They was no more likeness men than I wuz, and the machine the ole woman said was nothin but a lot of tin pails fur fish bait. Well, I cussed some, I tell yer. I was cross-eyed fur a week arter from lookin at that durned weather-cock, and the ole woman haint stopped sweatin yet."

"Well, Tony, that was rough."

"Taint half so rough as they'll find this country of they ever run across me, I can tell yer."

THE GREAT BREECHES QUESTION.—When Mr John Y. Mason, whose name the French printers would persist in spelling John-y, arrived at Paris, he was greatly puzzled about Mr May's famous circular, touching the matter of garments to be worn by our diplomats at court presentations. Whereupon he consulted with one of the ablest diplomats we then had abroad. This eminent person was an American citizen of African descent, and rejoiced in the plain name of John Diggs.

This colored diplomat had been taken from Philadelphia to Europe as a servant by Mr Rush, and left abroad by that Envoy Extraordinary. John had turned his attention to a study of diplomacy; and acquiring a knowledge of languages the distinguished politician sent abroad seldom possess, and blessed with a common sense our diplomats are prone to lack, he was eminently successful. He had, above all, a practical knowledge of the intricate and delicate ceremonies connected with court life. These rare accomplishments came in time to be known and appreciated; and the gentlemen of this free land of ours, who are taken from the political arena to make a part of the most cultivated, as well as the ablest, class connected with the governments of Europe, generally engaged John to meet them at Liverpool, that they might learn something of their untried and much dreaded duties.

Among the American diplomats thus dry-nursed by the accomplished Diggs was my corpulent and good natured chief, John Y. Mason. Of course on this delicate and difficult question of clothes John was consulted, and his opinion closed the discussion.

"I'll tell you what it is, Sah," he said, with great deliberation, balancing his tall figure on one leg, while the other permitted his toe to lightly touch the floor in a pose worthy a study. "I'll tell you what it is. You come here as de minister, and de Emperor or Monsieur Drouyn d'Luys 'll be glad to see you of you come in y'r shirt sleeves. But when de Empress, or Madame Drouyn d'Luys, invites you to de dinner or de reception, and puts on de card en uniform, you can do one thing or deadder; you can put on de uniform and go or you can keep off de uniform and stay at home. It wont do to go dah in y'r shirt sleeves an say dat was Mr May's instructions. No, Sah. You can mind Mr May's stid stay at home. An' my observations has taught me dat most of this diplomacy is done at dese entertainments."

"I'll be hanged!" exclaimed his Excellency, in the vulgar tongue of the Old Dominion, "if the nigger hasn't uttered more good sense on the subject than I have heard yet."—DIXON PIERCE, in Harper's Magazine.

A Fortunate Kiss.

The following pretty little story is told by Frederick Bremer, who vouches for its truth:

In the University of Upsala, in Sweden, lived a young student, a noble youth with great love for studies, but without means of pursuing them. He was poor without connections. Still he studied, and lived in poverty, but keeping up a cheerful heart, and trying to look hopefully to the future which looked so grim to him. His humor and excellent qualities made him beloved by his comrades. One day he was standing at the square prattling away with them an hour of leisure, when the attention of the young men became arrested by a young and elegant lady who, by the side of an elder was walking slowly across the place. It was the daughter of the governor of Upsala, living in the city, and the lady was her governess. "She was generally known for her goodness and gentleness of character, and was looked at with admiration by all the students."

As the young men stood gazing at the graceful vision, one of them suddenly remarked:

"Well, I think it would be worth something to have a kiss from such a sweet mouth."

The poor student, the hero of our story, who looked on that pure angelic face, said:

"Well, I think I could have it."

"What, cried his friends in chorus, are you crazy? Do you know her?"

"Not at all," he answered, "but I think that she would kiss me if I should ask her."

"In this place—and before all our eyes."

"Yes."

"Freely?"

"Yes."

"Well, if she will give you a kiss in that manner, I will give you a thousand dollars," said one.

"And I, and I," exclaimed three or four others, for it happened there were rich men in the group, and the bet was high on so important an event. The challenge was made and received in a good deal less time than we take to tell it.

Our hero (my authority tells me not whether he was plain or handsome; I have my own peculiar reasons for believing he was rather plain, but singularly good looking at the same time), immediately walked up to the lady and said:

"Mine fraulien, my fortune is now in your hands."

She looked at him in astonishment, but arrested her steps. He proceeded to state his name and condition, his aspirations, and related simply what had passed between him and his companions.

The young lady listened with great attention, and as he ceased to speak, she said blushing, but with great sweetness:

"If by so little a thing so much good can be effected, it would be foolish for me to refuse your request," and publicly in the open square she kissed him. Next day the student was sent for by the governor. He wanted to see the man who dared to seek a kiss from his daughter, and whom she consented to kiss.

He received him with a scrutinizing bow, but after an hours conversation was so pleased with him, that he invited him to dine at his tables during his studies at Upsala.

Our young friend pursued his studies in such a way that it soon made him regarded as the most promising student in the University.

Three years are now passed since the first kiss, when the young man was allowed to take the second kiss from the daughter of the governor as his wife.

He became, later, the most noted scholar in Sweden, and was respected for his character. His works will endure while time lasts among the works of science; and from this happy union sprung a family well known in Sweden at this time, whose wealth and high position in society are regarded as trifles, in comparison with its goodness and love.

Presidents and Cabinet.

The following facts are given of the announcements of former Cabinets: General Jackson arrived in Washington to prepare for his inauguration, February 11th, 1829 and the National Intelligencer announced the members of his Cabinet February 27th. Mr. Van Buren made but a single change in President Jackson's Cabinet. Gen. Harrison arrived in Washington February 8th, 1841, and Feb. 13th the National Intelligencer published as a "probability," the cabinet as it was subsequently constituted. Mr. Polk arrived in Washington February 13th, 1845, and his Cabinet was not organized till after March 1st. General Taylor arrived in Washington February 23, 1849, and his cabinet was announced March 3d. General Pierce arrived in Washington February 21, 1853, and four days before his arrival his probable cabinet was published, the list containing nearly all the names of those who were subsequently selected, though the assignment of positions was changed when the cabinet was formally announced. Mr Buchanan selected his cabinet at Lancaster, the Intelligencer printing the list correctly February 26, 1857, and the president elect arriving in Washington March 2d. Mr Lincoln arrived in Washington February 24th, 1861, but his cabinet was not fully decided upon till March 1.

Gold and Silver.

The official recapitulation of gold and silver coin on account of the United States from January, 1863, to January 9, 1869, shows $238,500,000. The largest sales were in 1867, namely, near $39,000,000 at New York. In 1863, over 39,000,000 were sold at New York and St. Louis. The taxes on the entire amount sold in those years were $118,000; commissions $263,000; premiums $108,222,000; net receipts about $346,500,000.

A recent estimate makes the total quantity of gold, in the form of coin, jewelry, vessels, utensils, in fact in all shapes, in the hands of man, is equal in value to $1,200,000,000 sterling. This would be 800,000,000 cubic inches. If converted into a single block its dimensions would not be less than 26 feet square, and its weight 10,500 tons. In the shape of seven-eighths placed in a single line on the ground, each coin being in contact with its neighbor, 1,200,000,000 sterling would form a track 4,300 miles in length.

The value of the silver in use is set down at $1,000,000,000 in sterling value. This in round numbers would be 4,000,000,000 ounces, or 400,000 cubic feet, measuring 100 feet square by 30 feet in height. In the shape of shillings placed in contact and in line, the globe itself would be more than twice encircled by this amount of silver.

Affecting Scene.

A very affecting scene occurred in the police court of Cincinnati recently. A gentle looking woman was arraigned for trial, after having been kept in the lock-up over night. The prosecuting witness was called upon to testify against the woman. He was a plain, honest looking mechanic, and when he confronted the judge and the woman, he said: "Judge, I cannot swear against her, for she is my wife; and I would not have her arrested, only it was impossible to live with her any longer. When sober she is as good a wife as lives, but for the past three months she has been intoxicated almost continually. Judge, please let her go home with me to our children, and I will pray for her to do better. Judge Straub gave the woman a severe lecture upon her conduct, causing her to keep tears of repentance, when she was sent home to her children in the hope that kindness and reflection might induce her to give up the ruinous habit which she had formed."

We are favored with sundry letters and essays on the alleged purchase of the Danish isle of St. Thomas, which assume to set forth how we are committed, how we are involved, &c.

We move the previous question.

Who was ever authorized to commit the United States by any such negotiation to any such purchase?

If any one has been authorized thus to involve us, the fact can be easily shown. Our constitution and laws are simple and straightforward. He who runs may read them. Will some one point out how and when any one was ever authorized to buy St. Thomas for the United States? Or how any one not so authorized had power to bind us, or could bind us legally or morally?

Until some one shall attempt this, we have no room for any more arguments in favor of boling away seven millions more of our needed gold for islands not worth one million, when we can get better for nothing if we will only be patient.

During a recent trial at Auburn, the following occurred:

Among the witnesses was one as verdant a specimen of humanity as one would wish to meet with. After a severe cross examination, the counsel for the government named, and then, putting on a look of severity, and an ominous shake of the head, exclaimed:

"Mr. Witness, has not an effort been made to induce you to tell a different story?"

"A different story from what I have told, sir?"

"That is what I mean."

"Yes, sir, several persons have tried to get me to tell a different story from what I have told, but they couldn't."

"Now, sir, upon your oath, I want to know who those persons are?"

"Wal, I guess you tried 'bout as hard as any of them."

The witness was dismissed, while judge, jury and spectators indulged in a hearty laugh.

Commissioner Wells gives the cost of the retail traffic in intoxicating liquors in Connecticut alone at $35,000,000 annually. This sum would support all the benevolent and philanthropic institutions in the country. To this may be added an immense sum for tobacco. The cost of rum and tobacco for the state would be more than sufficient to defray the expenses of educating every child in the land!

A youth who was playing marbles on Sunday, was asked, "Do you know where those little boys go who play marbles on Sunday?" He had not been sufficiently taught in regard to a future state, and replied, quite innocently, "Oh yes, some on 'em go the common, some on 'em goes down to the river."

BLANK NOTES for sale here.

Gen. Perkins and Tom Marshall were canvassing the state in a hotly contested election. The General was a roaring democrat, and by way of catching the flats, was fond of boasting that his father was a cooper by trade in an obscure part of the state. The great failing of the general was his fondness for old whisky; but the more he drank the more fond of a democrat he became, and the prouder he became of being the son of a cooper. Of this fact he had been making the most, when Marshall, in replying to his speech, looked at him with great contempt, and said:

"Fellow-citizens, he may have been a very good cooper—I don't deny that; but I do say, gentlemen, he put a mighty poor head into that whisky-barrel."

TITE SEEDS OF CONSUMPTION.

Once sown in the human body cannot be easily eradicated. The only infallible remedy yet discovered is Mishler's Herb Bitter. It has always proved successful in colds, coughs, and consumption.

THE American Fire-Lighter!

I would respectfully call the attention of the public to the late invention, the American Fire-Lighter, a substitute for Paper, Shavings, and Kindling Wood, used for kindling wood or coal fires.

It is put up neatly in boxes of one hundred blocks. Each block warranted to burn from ten to twelve minutes; therefore, one box of the fire lighter will kindle you one hundred wood or little coal fires.

Without the use of extra kindling.

It is neat and convenient; you will not have your floors strewn with litter when starting a fire; and when once used, you will never consent to be without it. You will find it superior to any other kindling. Please give it a fair trial. For sale by the general agent, A. F. BARTER, at the late J. Plume's tailoring establishment.
